

USGCRP member agencies support a broad array of communication activities. The program's communication efforts are intended to improve public understanding of climate change research by disseminating the results of USGCRP activities credibly and effectively, and by making USGCRP science findings and products available to a diverse set of audiences. The Communications Interagency Working Group (CIWG) facilitates communication of the results of individual agencies, and coordinates communication of integrated activities of the Federal Government. An additional ad hoc Working Group coordinates federal global change education activities.
